Reason for rules:

Student's Teacher signature: _

There are several reasons that rules are established in a classroom. One of these reasons include providing a proper learning environment in a public educational institution, which as such, has the responsibility and accountability to the community. Teachers have the right to teach and should be given respect Other students have the right to learn. Parents have a right to allow their children to attend a school in which their children can receive an education away from negative behaviors of others, such as intentional rudeness, disruptive talking, bullying, berating, unwilling participation of instructional activities and a general disrespect for teacher and/or classmates. Because the whole of society benefits from well-educated children, students need to be respectful and responsible citizens of their school and community.
